

TENNESSEE LICENSED PROFESSIONAL COUNSELORS ASSOCIATION

Presents

“Question, Persuade, Refer- Suicide Prevention”

Christopher Edwards, Suicide Prevention Trainer Southeast Regional Director

QPR (Question, Persuade, Refer) helps both professionals and lay care givers become more comfortable, competent, and comfortable when dealing with persons at risk. Participants learn how their own attitudes about suicide can affect their efforts to help. They gain the knowledge and skill to recognize and estimate suicide risk and learn how to intervene through role-playing and supervised simulations. Lastly, participants learn how to create crisis networks out of existing local resources.

Learning Objectives

- Gain an overview of current suicide data and trends nationally and locally
- Learn to detect verbal, behavioral, and situational clues for potential suicide risk
- Hone the skills of asking if someone is suicidal, persuade them to get help, and offer appropriate resources
- Acquire an understanding of how the new 988 rollout is operating locally
